Our schools were dismissed last Thursday at 10 a. m. to give the pupils an opportunity to attend thanksgiving services at the C. P. Church. The business houses closed for two hours, and there was no court held that day. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. T. Curry, and a large congregation was present. For want of room we cannot publish the program.

"Bud" Osborne, who lives about 11 miles from town, is a happy father. It is a 11-month boy, and a handsome one, too. A concert was given at Mary Sharp College last Saturday night by the Musical Department of that institution. We did not attend, but learn that the large audience present was highly entertained. We are glad to see that the Franklin County News, which is owned principally by the Faculty of the Winchester Normal, is taking so much interest in the Mary Sharp College of late.

"The Southern Railway News" is the heading of a large, elegantly printed newspaper, lately established in Knoxville, by Capt. B. F. Neville, who was born and raised in Franklin county, near Hickoryville, and by his untiring industry and good, natural sense, has made himself, most deservedly, a popular railroad man. His paper is a splendid exhibit of neatness, typographically, and it is full of good news. Neville is the South-eastern Passenger Agent of the Nashville & Louisville Railroad, and other roads, and if you want to go West, or anywhere, please address him, for your own behoof.

Prof. Joseph Bestolite, a young Italian, was a guest of W. J. Slater two nights last week, and his performances upon the guitar, to which he had attached a little folded card upon which he scribbled, conveying the sound by a wire, telephonically, was novel as well as sweet and interesting. One evening he was assisted by Miss Mary Taylor, on the piano, and her father, Mr. Wm. E. Taylor, on the violin. Next evening Miss Nannie Henderson assisted, on the piano, and all who know these most excellent performers need not be told that the ladies and gentlemen who gathered each evening were delightfully entertained.

A Protest.

The Puritans were a set of undesirable fanatics, who left England for England's good; and, who, not finding room in Holland, for their pestiferous heresies, sailed for the bleak coasts of New England.

If the ship that bore them had gone down in mid-ocean it would have saved America from numberless woes—Daniel Webster to the contrary notwithstanding.

I am not thankful for anything the Puritans ever did. And I protest against having a eulogy on them engraved down me when I go to a thanksgiving service. It spoils my turkey.

Explanatory.

Our clever friend, Mr. W. A. Cashion, must, or should, excuse us for not publishing his communication this week in regard to Prohibition. We will try and give it, in condensed form, next week. This week our columns are pre-occupied. Besides, this pyrotechnical piece about Prohibition is only the excusable outcropping of fanaticism, as it is always, and always has been, in religion, politics, finances, trade, &c. Reason that "best gift the fatal apple left us," will never bring about an equilibrium. The Home Journal is not a spasmodic sheet—it is a healthy one—not abnormal.

"The Guide" is the name of a neat 24-column Railroad name-publisher in Chattanooga, Tenn., by our clever friend, Mr. Wm. T. Rogers. He always makes us at home when we go to Chattanooga, and as he is general cyclop for information as to going West, and the best and cheapest routes, you should write to him—all you who are afflicted with a fever for the West, or North-west.

Free Trade versus Protection

We feel encouraged that the Nashville World, some two weeks since, copied in full our article written under the heading given above. And now that Carlisle has been elected, by an overwhelming vote, to be the Speaker of the lower house of the 48th Congress of the United States, and that Mr. Carlisle is a "Tariff-for-Revenue" man, the World and all papers opposed to Protection are naturally jubilant. Mr. Carlisle, of Kentucky, was nominated, in the Democratic caucus, upon first ballot, the vote in detail, by States, being as follows:

States.	Carlisle.	Randall.	Cox.
Alabama	3	4	0
Arkansas	5	0	1
California	2	1	3
Connecticut	0	3	0
Delaware	1	0	0
Florida	1	0	0
Georgia	8	1	0
Illinois	7	0	1
Indiana	5	1	3
Iowa	3	0	1
Kentucky	8	0	0
Louisiana	4	1	0
Maryland	0	4	0
Massachusetts	1	0	2
Michigan	6	0	0
Mississippi	5	0	0
Missouri	11	0	2
Nevada	1	0	0
New Jersey	0	3	0
New York	0	7	13
North Carolina	3	2	1
Ohio	2	6	5
Pennsylvania	0	11	0
South Carolina	4	2	0
Tennessee	6	2	0
Texas	10	6	0
Virginia	1	3	0
West Virginia	2	1	0
Wisconsin	5	0	0
Total	104	52	32

The nomination of Mr. Carlisle was then, upon motion of Mr. Randall, made unanimous. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Randall, Cox and Curran, was appointed to escort the nominee to the hall of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Carlisle was greeted with hearty applause and accepted the nomination in a few well-chosen words that were most cordially received, and while the Home Journal might be considered extreme, and, perhaps, very ignorant by such short-sighted men as the editor of the Lebanon Herald, (who has to wait to see how his friends go before he goes himself), yet, the Home Journal takes the cautious nomination of Mr. Carlisle (equivalent to an election,) to mean that the people are beginning to see that Free Trade is God's law, that Protection, in any shape, or for any thing, is an attempt to force natural laws out their proper sphere, and the result will finally be to the injury of the masses.

Now, we remember that a year or two since we were traveling from Houma, Louisiana, to New Orleans, and a large planter told us that if sugar was not protected his lands, for which he had paid fifty to one hundred dollars per acre, would not be worth five dollars per acre, and he would not be able to buy mules and agricultural implements, and EVERYBODY would suffer. We told the Doctor that, from our reading of the past and thoughts of the future, Free Trade was not an earthquake to swallow up his lands, his houses, &c. It might be that if Protection was taken off, foreign sugar would pour into the country, and he, unable to compete, might have to let his property be brought under the hammer, and go to doing something else. But this only showed that the principle, or, rather, the theory, of Protection, was wrong in the outset—a violation of Nature's law, and the penalty must surely come as knowledge advances. This idea of Protection has become a chronic disease with many good and intelligent men, and the Home Journal would pursue a gradual process to heal the ones who are sick nigh unto death with it. Our clever friend of Terrebonne Parish—one of the richest in Louisiana—must admit that the sum of the rise in the value of land is contributed by the consumers of sugar, who are thus far losers, whilst the sugar producer is not benefited by their contributions, except it be in the capacity of land monopolist. Reduce the cost of sugar, and he can get mules cheaper, and all sorts of implements, under Free Trade. He could get labor cheaper, and we would gradually return to the normal condition of trade, which God intended, and which is his international copyright to all mankind. Protection simply sends up everything protected to an unnatural value, and Free Trade will restore it to a natural and healthy value. And surely capital has been protected long enough. Under a system of free exchange every country will be enabled to furnish that which it can produce cheapest, and directly furnish the exportable article desired abroad, and bring in return the capital there overflowing the channels of production, to effect the production of the article here. It will not do for a government to ruin many to please a few. It will not do to create monopolies. It will not do to interfere with the natural relation between producer and consumer; to force into, or keep in, existence manufactures which otherwise would employ their capital otherwise, and enable us to import at so much less cost articles that we must pay almost double for in order to benefit, not the Government, but—monopolies, which have been the ruin of nations and society.

We shall have more to say in future.

Our space is too limited this week. It is remarkable, however, that in the vote for Speaker, Louisiana cast four for Carlisle and only one for Randall—the first gentleman being inclined to Free Trade, the latter to Protection.

To the Home Journal: It will be remembered that in my last I spoke of a Mr. Smith, late of Wisconsin, being located here as a citizen of our district. At this writing, I am sorry to say, Mr. Smith is no more. On Saturday morning, Dec. 1st, after a short illness, he passed from this mode of existence. Mr. Smith was, comparatively, a stranger here, but all who knew him liked him. His remains will be interred at the Winchester Cemetery this (Tuesday, Dec. 4,) afternoon.

From Maxwell.

To the Home Journal:

The continued growth of our town as a business center is noteworthy, as the magnitude of our business firms and their trade facilities. The ability with which they have entered to the trade, and the determined persistence with which they have labored to meet every want of our people is highly creditable. For fair dealing and polite gentlemen the firms of West & Patrick, Martin, Foster & Co., and the clever solid firm of Winford & Hall cannot be excelled. Maxwell is prosperous through the enterprise of her safe and solid merchants; and too it has a magnificent future for the same cause.

Mr. Tom Williams, a student of Spencer College, Van Buren county, is on a visit to his home here, but will return to school in a few days.
